MESSAGE FROM THE FOUNDER

Dear Friends and Supporters,

As I reflect on 2023-2024, I am inspired by how far we have come over the past few years. From the resilience demonstrated during the early phases of the COVID-19 pandemic to the milestones achieved this year, our journey has been marked by a commitment to scaled-deep, systemic change through the Impulse Model. Building on the foundations laid in 2021-2022 and 2022-2023, we continued to deep-dive into innovative solutions that address the root causes of unsafe migration, human trafficking, and exploitation.

The lingering impacts of the pandemic, job losses, economic instability, and mass displacement have exacerbated vulnerabilities, particularly for women and youth. With 97% of Indian households experiencing a decline in income (as reported by the Centre for Monitoring the Indian Economy), economic empowerment has become critical to addressing the structural inequalities that drive human trafficking. Women's financial independence, as we have seen, not only strengthens households but also fosters leadership and challenges gender stereotypes, creating pathways for long-term change.

The United Nations identifies refugees and forcibly displaced individuals as being especially vulnerable to human trafficking. Since the military coup in Myanmar in 2021, the displacement of people in India's Northeast has risen significantly. UNHCR estimates indicate 30,000 refugees in Zokhawthar, Mizoram, alone, although the actual number is likely much higher.

Recognizing these challenges and building on our successes since 2021, we scaled the Impulse Model Prevention Lab deeper, providing life-saving assistance to approximately 3,861 families across Mizoram, Nagaland, Manipur, and Myanmar. This initiative, supported by Chevron USA INC., has integrated agroforestry on 1200 acres, ensuring displaced families have both short-term sustenance and long-term livelihood opportunities. By enabling the multi-crop cultivation of food crops and delivering comprehensive livelihood training, we aim to reduce the risk of unsafe migration leading to human trafficking and mitigate tensions between displaced and host populations.

Our Impulse Case Management Centre (ICMC) has also scaled deeper its footprint to Assam, Manipur, and Sikkim, supported by the Azim Premji Foundation. Through case managers, awareness campaigns, and scaled-out services, we are enhancing access to justice for human trafficking survivors. These efforts are critical not only in addressing immediate cases but also in building frameworks that foster systemic prevention of unsafe migration leading to human trafficking across borders.

As global challenges escalate, we are extending our impact beyond India's Eight Northeastern States to the South Asian and Southeast Asian regions. This year, the opening of the Impulse NGO Network Regional Office in Bangkok, Thailand, marked a significant step in this direction. By supporting displaced populations across borders, we are advancing a regional approach to ending human trafficking, fostering partnerships that align with our vision of sustainable livelihoods and environmental stewardship.

At the heart of our interventions lies a commitment to creating environmentally sustainable solutions that reduce carbon footprints while generating livelihoods for indigenous communities. By scaling deep multi-crop agroforestry, sustainable product ecosystems, and for-profit models for indigenous crafts, we are working towards a future that balances economic empowerment interventions with ecological resilience.

Looking forward, our focus remains clear: to deepen our impact, scale our Impulse Model's proven solutions, and empower vulnerable populations. Together, with your steadfast support, we will continue to forge a path toward a world free from human trafficking and exploitation—a world where safety, dignity, and opportunity are within reach for all.

In solidarity,
Hasina Kharbhih
Founder, Impulse NGO Network

Traditional tribal motifs and cultural symbols were adapted into contemporary home collections, including cushions, table runners, mats, wall hangings, and cushion covers, strengthening artisan skills and market-oriented production.

Impulse Model Partnership

The Regional Consultation on “Life-Saving Assistance to Someone Searching for Safety” marked the next step in strategic planning to ensure a sustainable public-private partnership and fundraising for the gaps identified. The initiative served as a regional review of its impact under the Prevention Pillar of the Impulse Model. Bringing together state and country partners from Mizoram, Nagaland, Manipur, Arunachal Pradesh, Sikkim, and Myanmar, including the Impulse Model Press Lab core committee, the consultation reflected on the initiative’s contribution to food security, multi-crop farming, indigenous seed bank, agroforestry, livelihood support, and protection for displaced communities. The consultation also included remarks from the Chief Minister of Mizoram and the Chevron USA Inc. representative, acknowledging the initiative’s impact. Country and state partners further discussed a roadmap for sustaining the work beyond the innovation period through continued collaboration, community-based livelihood support, and cross-border partnership.

"SUCCESS STORY

A 17-year-old boy from Bangladesh was rescued in Shillong and placed in a children's shelter home. Through the Impulse Case Management Centre (ICMC), the Case Manager coordinated with the Child Welfare Committee, the shelter home, the Bangladesh High Commission, and the country partner to support documentation, verification, and safe repatriation. The Home Investigation Report and other required documents were collected, compiled, and shared with the Bangladesh High Commission in Guwahati, following which a travel permit was issued. With all stakeholders connected through a coordinated response, the child was safely repatriated on 30 November 2023. At the border, he was received by the country partner BRAC, the shelter home team, and police officials and was formally handed over to his father in the presence of the Border Security Force, Bangladesh, at Tamabil. This case reflects the role of the ICMC as a single-window coordination platform that helps ensure timely communication, documentation, and safe cross-border repatriation.

CASE STUDIES

MULTI-CROP FARMING & AGROFORESTRY

The Agroforestry initiative by Impulse NGO Network, in partnership with state and country partners like YMCA, Myanmar, New Life Foundation, Cod Nerc, and Bethesda Youth Welfare Centre, addressed critical food security challenges in conflict-affected regions across India and Myanmar. These efforts provided immediate relief and fostered long-term resilience through sustainable agricultural practices.

Combined Impact Across Regions

- Immediate Relief and Long-term Resilience

The initiative distributed essential supplies like seeds, saplings, farming tools, and compost while offering training in sustainable farming methods. Communities were empowered to cultivate food crops for their own consumption and income generation. Across India and Myanmar:

Over 1,000 families (6-7 members) benefited directly from agroforestry programs. More than 800 (6-7 members) additional families received food from surplus yields. Bringing the total beneficiary count to approximately 12,600.

Crops such as corn, beans, bitter melon, eggplant, and paddy were cultivated to suit the environmental and social needs of diverse regions.

- Strengthening Host-Displaced Family Dynamics

The program encouraged collaboration between host communities and internally displaced families (Manipur IDPs) and externally displaced families (Burmese displaced persons), fostering unity. Shared fields and resources alleviated food insecurity, strengthened relationships, and promoted social cohesion.

- Enhancing Food Security Through Resilience

Flood-resistant crops and innovative farming techniques enabled communities to withstand environmental challenges like floods and droughts, ensuring sustainable food production.

Impulse Model Prevention: Success Stories from the Innovation

Building Unity Through Shared Fields (India)

In Nagaland, host communities received farming tools and indigenous seeds. Within the Impulse Model Prevention, a 50:50 shared multi-crop farming initiative with displaced communities from Myanmar saw them share fields and increase crop yields, creating a sense of unity.

“Sharing fields with displaced families has brought us closer, strengthening our bond and helping us all grow together.”

Empowering Women-Led Households (Myanmar)

Soe Seint Seint Thu, a displaced farmer from Kayah State, took care of her physically challenged sister and mother amidst immense hardships. With seeds and training from Impulse NGO Network and country partner YMCA, she revived her family’s livelihood in Shan State, providing food security and hope.

“This support was a blessing. It helped me restart farming and support my family when I thought all was lost.”

Generosity in Adversity (Irrawaddy Region)

U Saw William shared his land with displaced families under the Impulse Model Prevention, growing flood-resistant crops through multi-crop farming and agroforestry support. His initiative became a pillar of resilience for his community.

“Thanks to the seeds and guidance, I can share what we grow with my neighbors and help our village keep going strong.”

Resilience Through Church and Community (Mandalay Region)

Rev. Latt Kho Satt turned his church into a sanctuary for displaced families, offering vacant land for farming under the Impulse Model Prevention. The agroforestry project provided seeds and training, ensuring self-sufficiency for all.

“This land has always been a place of community, but now it is also a place of resilience and hope.”

Economic Recovery for the Vulnerable (Mizoram)

Displaced widows and elderly individuals, like Mrs. Chuaineikimi and Mr. Tawkluaia, were supported with dry rations and agroforestry resources. They now grow and sell crops, generating income and securing food for their families.

Mrs. Chuaineikimi: “Since starting cultivation, we’ve been able to eat, sell, and even save seeds for future planting. This support makes me smile and forget our hardships.”

Mr. Tawkluaia: “Harvesting chili earned us Rs. 1,50,000. These moments make me hopeful.”
